Like every age, ours has its dangerous ideas. Hundreds of disinvitation movements have sprung up on American college campuses in recent years in reaction to ideas some find threatening, offensive, or dangerous. These varied movements have targeted a broad spectrum of influential intellectuals--from classical liberals like Ayaan Hirsi Ali to leftists like Angela Davis to conservatives like David Horowitz. By exploring books by many such disinvited authors, this course explores contemporary contention over free speech, provides a window into the dangerous ideas of our time, and will help students think more deeply about the virtues and costs of censoring them.

Grading:Class Dinners* (5% of grade)

Attendance is mandatory for at least two dinners

Class Participation (25% of grade)

Class participation includes mandatory attendance, keeping up on the readings and being prepared to discuss them in class, offering your informed opinions in class discussions, asking questions, answering questions, and arguing points that are specifically related to the reading.

First Paper (20% of grade)

Due on November 8th

Final Paper (30% of grade)

Due on December 20th

Reading Quizzes (20% of grade)

There will be 12 in-class reading quizzes during the semester. They will take place at the beginning of class and include a few short-answer questions. They will ask about the central arguments and ideas in the assigned reading(s) for that class. You will have 15 minutes to answer them. Each reading response is graded out of 2 points.

GRADING RUBRIC:

2 = EXCELLENT. Demonstrates an exceptionally high level of understanding of the material.

1 = GOOD. Demonstrates a solid understanding of the material. Analysis is mostly on target but contains one or more important errors, omissions, or irrelevancies.

0 = POOR. Demonstrates a limited understanding of the material. Analysis misses the main point and/or contains several important errors, omissions, or irrelevancies.

We will drop your two lowest scores, including zeros resulting from unexcused absences, so that only 10 scores count toward your course grade. Altogether, reading responses are worth 20% of your course grade (10 reading responses x 2 points each = 20 course points). Students with excused absences (which require a note from the dean's office or your coach) may schedule a make-up reading response, which will consist of different questions about the same set of readings.

Class Rules:

1. No open laptops during class! No texting in class! All electronic devices should be turned off.
2. CMC and Pitzer take academic honesty and intellectual property rights seriously. Cheating, plagiarism, and misuse of sources will result in a failing grade and referral to the Academic Standards Committee/Judicial Council.
